#futurework challenge

THE EUROPEAN COMPETITION
that looks  beyondwork

The working world of tomorrow

Whether skilled trade, industry, care or commerce, occupations are always changing. New fields are emerging, whilst old ones are evolving, melting together or even disappearing entirely. Innovative tools are changing daily tasks, just as factors like digitisation and working remotely are bringing about far-reaching changes in the professions of today.

Whilst we can't say with any certainty what our day-to-day work will look like in the future, we can help to shape the work of tomorrow. Teenagers and young adults of today, in particular, will decide which fields, occupations and activities are relevant for the future, which is why the Federal Ministry of Education and Research is calling for you to take a creative look at the future as part of the beyondwork2020 conference: with the #futureworkchallenge competition.

Taking part is well worthwhile!

If you'd like to delve into the world of future occupations, then get involved and identify or invent your occupation with a future! Participation is worthwhile with great prizes to be won!

- Video workstation: computer, camera, speakers and editing software
- 3D workstation: computer, VR headset, 3D printer and 3D software
- Mobile workstation: laptop, projector and headphones
- and much more

Occupations with a future

How will electricians work 20 years from now? Will there be astrogardeners? That's for you to decide!

Your objective: Introduce an occupation with a future, explain it in a few words (German or English) and submit the results as a video or photo via Instagram or email by 30 September 2020. It doesn't matter if you use props, paint or even dance, as long as you're creative!

The competition conference: beyondwork2020

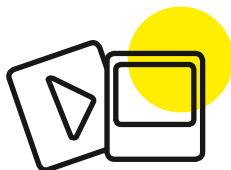

On 21 and 22 October 2020, the Federal Ministry of Education and Research will be organising the European conference on labour research beyondwork2020, which will take place at the World Conference Center Bonn as well as online.

Representatives of European politics, research and business as well as the social partners will discuss how companies and their employees can prepare for the working world of the future. It's primarily about the structure of this change as well as the topics of health and prevention, education and training, working in a connected work, and artificial intelligence.

How to take part

Think of an occupation of the future
